This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

THE Miniatures which formed a ſection of the Loan Collection in 1862, were objects of ſo much intereſt that it is propoſed to give a further development to an exhibition of this art—in which Engliſh artiſts were the firſt to excel, and which, though now ſeldom practiſed, flouriſhed in England for nearly three centuries.

2. The Loan Collection compriſed chiefly the works of our early Miniaturiſts, Hilliard, Iſaac and Peter Oliver, and Cooper (works which poſſeſſed an antiquarian intereſt), with a few by Coſway, R.A., and ſome other artiſts. But the object of a ſecond collection, though not confined to the productions of Engliſh Miniaturiſts, ſhould eſpecially be to make a repreſentative exhibition of their works, identified with their, in ſo many inſtances, almoſt forgotten names.

3. In ſeeking the aſſiſtance of the collectors and poſſeſſors of Miniature art, they ſhould therefore be particularly ſolicited to ſtate as far as it is poſſible to do ſo authentically:—

i. The name and titles of the perſons repreſented and the date of the portrait.

ii. The Chriſtian and Surname of the artiſt, and

iii. His birth-place, date of birth, and death (where not commonly known) with any other particulars that may prove of intereſt.

A requeſt ſhould at the ſame time be made that ſuch perſons will kindly point out any other perſons who poſſeſs miniatures, which it is probable they will lend for exhibition.

The Collection might be completed ſo as to open ſome time in June next, and ſhould include Miniature Portraits—

i. In Enamel.

ii. In Oil and in Water Colours.

iii. In Chalk, or in Pencil, whether drawn on vellum, or paper, in plumbago ſolely, or in the latter manner with the face tinted.

The following by no means exhauſtive liſt, contains the names of many of the artiſts who practiſed in England and whoſe works ſhould be ſought out and ſolicited for exhibition.

Miniaturiſts of the 16th Century.

Hans Holbein.
John Bettes.

Mr. R. F. Sketchley (a member of the Committee) acted as Secretary for the Special Exhibition, and the Rev. James Beck, M.A., with Mr. R. H. Soden Smith, M.A., took an active ſhare in the formation of the Exhibition and preparation of the Catalogue.

INTRODUCTORY NOTICE.

THE Miniature Art of England poſſeſſes this diſtinguiſhed peculiarity—that, while no native painter had attained excellence in life-ſized oil portraiture before the time of Vandyke, we have in Miniature Art a ſucceſſion of eminent "painters in little," commencing with Nicholas Hilliard in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, and continued by John Hoſkins, the two Olivers, father and ſon, down to the inimitable Samuel Cooper, in the reign of Charles I.

The Works of theſe men became the treaſures of their own and of ſucceeding generations. Unlike the larger portraits of their foreign competitors, which, in the troubled days that enſued, were expoſed to all the mutations of our great families, the miniature was moſtly a cheriſhed decoration worn about the perſon and eaſily concealed. Many have thus deſcended to us, ineſtimable both for their art and as the ſole recollections of ſeveral of England's moſt diſtinguiſhed men, while others, deſpoiled in times of need of their jewelled ſettings, have been loſt or deſtroyed.

Miniature painting appears to have naturally ariſen in the development of the ancient miſſal painter's practiſe, and in its firſt ſtages to have been connected with the ornamental art of the goldſmith and the jeweller. The miniaturiſt began by uſing the opaque colours of the miſſal painter, and like him he introduced gold to heighten the effect of his dreſſes and ornaments; but as the art progreſſed we find him treating the face, and then other parts of his work, with tranſparent colour. The earlieſt miniatures were drawn on vellum or on thin cardboard. The artiſts we have mentioned, to whom ſhould be added Thomas Flatman, a poet as well as a painter, practiſed in this manner. Soon after, the art of painting with vitrifiable colours added greater luſtre and brilliancy to the miniaturiſt's ſkill; and later, probably in the reign of James II, ivory was ſubſtituted for paper or vellum, giving the means of more delicate completion, and, by its creamy whiteneſs, increaſed beauty of colour.

The art of enamelling is of great antiquity and uncertain origin. The encruſted enamels of Limoges were moſtly applied to utenſils for the church, and were the admiration of the 13th century. Benvenuto Cellini uſed this proceſs to heighten the perfection of his works in ſilver and gold, and the goldſmiths of Germany employed it with ſucceſs in reproducing the deſigns of Hans Holbein. About the beginning of the 15th century, by an improved proceſs, painted enamels became applicable to miniature portraits, an art which was certainly derived from France, but was not brought to much perfection till towards the middle of the 17th century.

In 1632 a goldſmith, named Jean Toutin, who was ſkilled in the uſe of tranſparent enamels, produced a variety of colours which when uſed upon a thin ground of white enamel vitrified in the furnace without any change of tint. Theſe colours were applied in the ſame manner as water colours uſed on vellum or ivory; they were the materials of the firſt miniaturiſts, and a few years later they enabled the great Jean Petitot to carry the art to its higheſt excellence. They conſiſted of metallic oxides with fluxes of vitrifiable ſubſtances, chiefly ſilica and borax, both fuſible at a heat capable of being reſiſted by the metal ground, whether gold or copper, on which they are to be uſed; it is alſo eſſential that theſe materials ſhould be of a character to adhere firmly to the ground, ſhould poſſeſs the tranſparency or opacity required to give finiſh to the artiſt's work, and maintain after fuſion a clear ſmooth vitreous ſurface.

The colour produced results either simply from the colouring material used, or from the chemical combination of that material with the flux. The delicacy of the whole process will appear surprising when the brilliancy of colour and the minute beauty and perfection of finish attainable in the enamelled miniature are considered; and that the work, when completed, unites these qualities with its imperishable character.

There is, however, another class of artists whom we now term miniaturists, who practised towards the latter half of the 17th century. They were by education engravers, and both drew from the life and engraved the subjects of their portraiture, as is recorded on their plates "ad vivum." In this manner David Loggan, his pupil Robert White, and Thomas Forster, attained great excellence. Their works formed the portrait frontispieces of the books of that time, and were among the first book illustrations. Dryden writes of a would-be poet,—

> "And at the front of all his senseless plays > Makes David Loggan crown his head with bays."

And the impressions of the plates of these artists, as well as their highly wrought drawings, were then, and continue to be, highly prized by collectors.

Such was the art of our first miniature painters. Commencing on card or vellum, then using the newly discovered enamel process, and lastly, ivory, as the means of higher perfection, and contemporary with this the drawing in plumbago, as it was then called.

When portrait art in England degenerated after the death of Vandyke, and Lely and Kneller were followed by Jervis and Hudson, miniature painting fell into the same debasement. One of the sons of Petitot, and of the same Christian name, settled in London at this time, and practised miniature enamel. Charles Boit also came to our Metropolis, and painted in enamel under the patronage of Queen Anne. But the art languished in their hands till Christian F. Zincke, founding his style, it is true, after Kneller, and ſome while the pupil of Boit, painted in enamel with great induſtry and ſucceſs. Commencing with the beginning of the 18th century, he was for many years without a rival, and his works are juſtly admired for their beauty of execution and correct drawing.

When at length the portrait painter's art received a new impulſe from the noble works of Reynolds and Gainſborough, a new ſchool of miniaturiſts grew up, and the art again ſhone luſtrouſly in the works of Jeremiah Meyer, Nathaniel Hone, Richard Coſway, Samuel Shelley, Richard Collins, John Smart, and a number of other talented men, who, far from lacking employment, were beſet by faſhion; and beauty was decked with lockets, brooches, and bracelets, in which the painter's work vied with the precious materials of the jeweller's. Under ſuch encouragement another generation of miniaturiſts ſucceeded, and the art in modern days culminated with Henry Edridge, Henry Bone, Andrew Robertſon, Alfred Chalon, Sir William Roſs, and ſome few eminent men who have ſurvived it,—for, ſtrange to ſay, miniature painting, which had during nearly three centuries been practiſed by ſo many great artiſts, ſuddenly collapſed before the cheap mechanical proceſſes of photography, and is now almoſt loſt.

At this criſis the preſent exhibition has been formed; it will awaken many recollections, will bring again into notice men of the paſt generation, whoſe names and works deſerve to live in our memories, and with regard to whom ſome few facts will be found appended to the Catalogue, but confined chiefly to deceaſed artiſts of the Engliſh ſchool. However meagre theſe notices may appear, the information has been ſought in many ſources, and will be gladly extended by any facts which may yet be ſupplied by relatives or friends.

At the very outſet of the undertaking the queſtion aroſe—what conſtitutes a miniature portrait? It was admitted that miniatures may be painted or drawn on any material, and with any material uſed by the artiſt, and in every ſtyle of art. Commencing with the head only, to which the ſkill of ſome of our early "face painters" was limited, we find their works followed by miniature half-lengths, whole-lengths, and groups; but from theſe no technical accepted definition of the term miniature can be derived. Without, therefore, attempting to lay down a rule, it was deemed beſt, in the intereſts of the Exhibition, to accept all ſuch works as were drawn to a ſmall ſcale, and were in reſpect to manner of a miniature character, except paintings on porcelain. Many works were offered which did not poſſeſs this character; many more whoſe art-merits did not entitle them to a place in the Exhibition,—while ſome have been admitted as forming part of a collection, or as repreſenting the art of a known painter though their merit is but of a low claſs.

In determining the ſcheme for arranging the Exhibition, it would have been moſt natural to have proceeded chronologically, by which both the artiſt and his ſubject (except where an old portrait had been copied, as is often the caſe with the enamelliſt) would have been brought into their due places; and the Exhibition rendered more intereſting in the exemplification of art, biography, and the ſtudy of coſtume. But among other difficulties which preſented themſelves, the ſeparation of family miniatures, and of the poſſeſſions of diſtinguiſhed collectors, were obſtacles which could not be properly overlooked; and on theſe grounds, as well as from the neceſſity which would have been unavoidable of deferring the arrangement till the whole of the works had been received, any attempt at chronological ſequence was abandoned. It is propoſed, however, to compile Chronological and Hiſtorical Indexes for the aſſiſtance of ſtudents and viſitors.

It is alſo eſſential to explain that, except in ſome few caſes of obvious error, the names both of the perſons repreſented and of the artiſts, have been catalogued as deſcribed by the poſſeſſors of the works lent, as it was not deemed right, however ſtrong the preſumption, to attempt to diſturb names which have poſſibly been traditional for ſeveral generations, or juſt towards thoſe who have ſo graciouſly lent their family treaſures. In ſeveral caſes where the name of the painter of a miniature was unknown to its poſſeſſors, it has been added, where this could be ſatisfactorily done. But for the reaſons given, the Catalogue cannot be referred to as evidence of the authenticity of works whoſe origin is doubtful.

We truſt it is not beyond hope that the Exhibition of the works of ſo many diſtinguiſhed men, and the beauty of their art, may lead to its revival. At leaſt, it ſeems not unreaſonable to expect that the collection will conduce to a more general appreciation of the value of the works which remain to us, and tend to their better preſervation; for it is truly painful to ſee how many fine miniatures have been expoſed to the ſun till all their colour has been abſolutely burnt out, while others have equally ſuffered from damp, or from the abſence of the moſt ordinary protection required for works of ſuch minute delicacy. But worſt of all are the ruthleſs, ignorant repairs which many have undergone, deſtroying every trace of the genius which had once characterized them, and bringing them down to the level of the many made-up deceptions of paſt generations no leſs than of our own.

1064. PORTRAIT OF KING CHARLES I.

This intereſting relic is formed of the king's hair dipped in his blood on the ſcaffold. The long hair which he wore was probably cut off for the convenience of the executioner; for Sir Henry Halford, deſcribing the condition of the remains when examined in 1813 by order of the Prince Regent, ſtates that at the back of the head the hair was cut ſhort. It has always been conſidered an heirloom in the family and belonged to John Winckley, who was executed at Lancaſter Caſtle in 1716, with the Earl of Derwentwater, for the Jacobite riſing of 1715. On the back of the token are engraved the names of thoſe of the family who adhered to the cauſe of the Stuarts in 1745, viz. S. Heſketh, R. Heſketh, N. Winckley, T. Winckley. The Dowager Lady Shelley, to whom it was bequeathed by her father, the late Thomas Winckley Eſq., of Brockholes, co. Lancaſter, remembers wearing it, when a child, on ſome Jacobite anniverſary, about 1790.

HOLBEIN, HANS. Born in 1498, at Baſle, or at Augſburg, where his father was a painter. Under him he ſtudied with great ſucceſs, and learnt alſo graving, caſting, modelling, and architecture. Yet, maſter of all theſe arts, he was poor, waſting his gains in debauchery. He came to England in 1526, bringing an introduction from Eraſmus to Sir Thomas More, with whom he at once found employment. At the end of three years he gained by the favour of Sir Thomas the patronage of Henry VIII, who took him into his ſervice, and gave him apartments in his palace, with a ſalary of 200 florins. He painted in oil and water colours, both opaque and tranſparent. His miniatures are ſpiritedly drawn, and finiſhed with great delicacy and power. He was ambi-dexter. He is generally ſtated to have died in England of the Plague in 1554. But a writer in the Gentleman's Magazine for April, 1861, ſtates that his will had been found in the Regiſtry of London, which proves him to have died in 1543.
